JACKSON, Miss. – Dr. Thomas Mosley, Billy S. Guyton Distinguished Professor and director of The MIND Center, will give a talk, "Brain Aging: Insights from Population-Based Studies at UMMC," on Friday, Oct. 4, at 11 a.m. in Classroom 7A, located in the original UMMC Hospital building. It is free and open to the public.

Through his decades of innovative research, Dr. Mosley has become an internationally recognized expert in brain aging and cognitive decline. The lecture is part of the Department of Psychiatry and Human Behavior's grand rounds.

Members of the public may park in Garage A, walk behind the School of Nursing building and enter the School of Medicine. Turn immediately left through the sliding glass doors then right to the elevators at the back of the building. Proceed to floor seven and follow the signs to Classroom 7A.

The University of Mississippi Medical Center, located in Jackson, is the state's only academic medical center. UMMC encompasses five health science schools, including medicine, nursing, health related professions, dentistry and graduate studies, as well as the site where University of Mississippi pharmacy students do their clinical training. The Medical Center's health-care enterprise includes five hospitals and University Physicians, the faculty group practice. The Medical Center's threefold mission is to educate tomorrow's health-care professionals, conduct innovative research to improve human health, and to provide the highest quality care available to the state's population. A major goal of the Medical Center is the improvement of the health of Mississippians and the elimination of health disparities.
