

Grow your career and a healthier world.

Population Level Health Improvement

Earn a master's degree in Population Health Management at the John D. Bower School of Population Health at the University of Mississippi Medical Center, and you'll gain the tools and knowledge to help chart the course of population health.

Skills to Grow Your Career

You'll master skills in areas including practice redesign, new incentive payment models, team-based models of care, electronic medical records (EMRs), quality improvement, identifying patient groups, service bundling, working with accountable care organizations, implementing health management approaches, maximizing community assets, and much more.

A Program That Fits Your Life

This accredited, executive program is designed for health care professionals with clinical backgrounds, including physicians, nurses, dentists, pharmacists, clinical psychologists, social workers, and others, and offers:

- Flexible, online classes that allow you to earn your master's while working.
- A cohort-based structure that fosters collaboration with other clinicians.
- Course credit toward a PhD in Population Health Science.
- Courses led by nationally-respected leaders in population health management.
- A strong focus on applied learning, so you quickly put new principles into practice.

An Intensive Yet Practical Course Structure

The 12-month program consists of four nine-week quarters and begins with a one-week intensive summer course on the campus of UMMC in Jackson. Each quarter will include an intensive three-day weekend on campus, in conjunction with online classes and web conferences. Participants will complete two courses per quarter, and the curriculum will culminate in a practical, real-world project to improve clinical practice.

To learn more about the program or to apply, visit umc.edu/SoPH or email populationhealthscience@umc.edu

Master of Science in Population Health Management

Executive Program

The University of Mississippi Medical Center
2500 North State Street | Jackson, Mississippi 39216