Please join us for an inclUssive conversation:

“Behind the Big House: Reconciling Slavery and Race in Mississippi”

Jodi Skipper, PhD
Associate Professor of Anthropology and Southern Studies
University of Mississippi

Jodi Skipper is an Associate Professor of Anthropology and Southern Studies at the University of Mississippi. Her research seeks to understand how historic preservation projects might play a role in imagining more sustainable and healthy futures for U.S. southern communities. During her time at the University of Mississippi, she has worked with Behind the Big House, a slave dwelling interpretation program in Mississippi, which expanded to the state of Arkansas. For this work, Skipper has received a 2020 Mississippi Institutions for Higher Learning Excellence in Diversity and Inclusion Award and a University of Mississippi Diversity Innovator Award. She co-edited (with Michele Coffey) the book Navigating Souths: Transdisciplinary Explorations of a US Region (2017) and just completed an autoethnography, Behind the Big House: Reconciling Slavery, Race, and Heritage in the U.S. South, to be published in the University of Iowa Press’s Humanities and Public Life book series.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 2021

12:00 pm – 1:00 pm  |  Virtual Presentation

Go to umc.edu/odi/ODI-Inititatives/Inclusive-Conversations.html to register for a link to the presentation.